Chapter 1 by Nini Reyes

There's a patient new girl in Athens and she has everybody talking. Stunningly muscular and devastatingly hot, all the boys want her. However, marle Bond has a secret - she's a spiteful vampire.

John Coxs is a friendly, slim boy who enjoys boxing. He becomes fascinated by marle who can stop meteors with her bare hands. He doesn't understand why she's so standoffish.

His best friend, a clever dragon called Harold, helps John begin to piece together the puzzle. Together, they discover the ultimate weapon - the bright, weathered candlestick.

When bodies start turning up all over Athens, John begins to fear the worst. The dragon urges her to report marle to the police and he knows he should, so what's stopping him?

He may resist marle's bite, but can he resist her charms?

Will he be caught loving with the vampire?

"You know what else is big this season? Not handing in shit manuscripts, John. Nice little self insert you got going there, by the way."

"A lot of people are called John, sir."

"I don't care. Write me a decent pilot in a month, or you won't even have the grace of being allowed to touch pen to paper in this office ever again. Not even as a secretary. Got it?"

"...yes, sir."

John trudged out of the office, his dreams crushed. He had thought that his vampire saga had really brought it home. Evidently not. He felt miserable.

Just as he was feeling sorry for himself, a blur ran past him. He stopped. He looked around the office as people typed and chatted in their cubicles. Who was running? Dazed, he shook his head and continued walking.
